SPECIAL FOCUS: STYLE SURVEY

| EDITED BY ERIKA AYN FINCH AND KYLE HOEPNER |

ach year we engage with the women and men of New England's residential design and building community to find out just what aesthetic currents they see ebbing and flowing in our part of the world. Asked to comment on a wide range of style trends and ideas relating to architecture, interiors, landscapes, and more, here is what they told us.

1. Reading nooks, like this one by ZeroEnergy Design, are now replacing homework rooms.
2. Knickerbocker Group installed a movable wall system to open this home to the outdoors.

3. LDa Architecture & Interiors designed this tidy dressing room for a male client.

Architectural Style and Structure

Ornamented ceilings: Beams and paneling TRENDING: 70% 7 | 20% → | 10% ¥

"Beams and paneling are a classic ceiling treatment, and they remain effective ways to express scale and enhance the character of a space."

-Andrew Reck, Oak Hill Architects

"In an effort to add layers, warmth, shadows, and relief to sparer, more modern spaces, ceilings are becoming a way to 'play dress up' and be noticed. Wallpaper and paint treatments have remained solid for the past many years, and architectural elements are the new wallpaper."

-Dean Sawyer, LDa Architecture & Interiors

Ornamented ceilings: Decorative paint treatments

TRENDING: 12% 7 | 50% -> | 33% >>

"As wallpaper increases in popularity, with growth in style and texture options, requests for decorative paint treatments are decreasing. That said, if a paper can be reproduced by a skilled faux painter, we will often encourage our clients go that route, to create a seamless look that will last much longer than wallpaper."

-Brady-Anne Cushing, Knickerbocker Group

"Steel windows and doors are not a great fit for New England's climate. Even products available with a thermal break may still create pools of water inside the home due to the inevitable condensation. We're seeing a growing interest in thermally broken aluminum as well as wood-clad aluminum."

Outdoor game areas: Oversized chessboards, ping-pong tables, etc.

TRENDING: 75% 7 | 25% → | 0% ≥

"We see a growing interest in creating space for lawn games in general, but not overly prescriptive spaces. We'll often plan for an open, level area that might be used for bocce, croquet, or parties and receptions." -Stephanie Horowitz

Reclaimed granite for steps and pavers

TRENDING: 86% 7 | 14% -> | 0% >

"This has become a standard for the majority of our gardens. It's an excellent way to create a garden filled with history and meaning, and of course patina!" -Matthew Cunningham

Ferns used as groundcovers

TRENDING: 25% 75% → | 0% ≥ 1

"Ferns are an excellent alternative to mown grass and other groundcovers. They are resilient in many different growing conditions, have wonderful fall character, and they tend to hold up over the long haul-which helps maintain the original intent of the garden design." - Matthew Cunningham

"Masses of similar plants are a popular look. Also, green-and-white gardens, with limited other colors: clean and classy." -Colin Hand

Creeping thyme planted between pavers

TRENDING: 67%  7 | 33% → | 0% ≥

"Thyme is beautiful, it's fragrant, and it tolerates a little foot traffic here and there. But it can be short-lived and needs regular weeding-which, given how busy most of our clients are, makes it not the most practical groundcover." - Matthew Cunningham

Succulents used indoors

TRENDING: 0% 7 | 67% -> | 33% >>

- 4. Outdoor fireplaces, such as this striking specimen from a Blade of Grass, and other fire features remain greatly in demand.
- 5. Landscape architect Matthew Cunningham swears by the value of ferns and other native groundcovers.
